

We were deeply saddened to learn that rabbits and other small animals were given away as prizes at the Livingston Parish Fair this month. This outdated practice of using animals for carnival prizes often leads to abandonment, neglect and suffering. When animals like rabbits are “won” at fairs, the new owners are rarely prepared for the responsibility of long-term pet care. Many of these animals are abandoned in parks or neighborhoods, where they cannot survive. Veterinarians frequently treat rabbits for shock, dehydration, malnutrition and injuries following such events. One local resident shared: “I watched as teens won a bunny and treated it cruelly, throwing it around and shaking fish in bags. The parents didn’t care.” Another described seeing a child with a bunny in a laundry basket. The terrified bunny was carried around all afternoon without food, water or a chance to move. We’ve successfully stopped live animal giveaways in the past, and we will continue to advocate for fairs and festivals to choose kinder alternatives like stuffed animals, ensuring that no animal suffers or dies for a prize.

Molly’s Feeling Better! A Livingston Parish sheriff’s deputy contacted us on behalf of Molly (right), a sweet little pup with a fractured jaw. Her family, facing financial hardships, simply couldn’t afford her treatment. We stepped in to help, and we are pleased to report that Molly is now out of pain and healing.

Magic’s Rescue. Magic (left) was a lost soul, wandering the woods miles from the nearest town. Starving, dehydrated and suffering from numerous health issues, the exhausted pup wouldn’t have survived much longer on his own. Luckily, a group of pipe welders found him and reached out for help. We were able to get him the urgent care he needed, and he’s now on the road to recovery.

Lil Girl (left) was suffering with a severely injured eye that required removal. Her elderly owners, unable to afford the necessary procedure, reached out in desperate need. Thanks to the generosity of our Emergency Fund donors, Lil Girl received the urgent care she needed. Her family is overjoyed and immensely grateful for the support.

We were thrilled to partner with our friends at Vegan Outreach for the second annual NOLA Vegan Chef Challenge this September! This exciting plant-based competition encourages local restaurants to introduce new vegan menu items, with diners voting for their favorites. A special thanks to Board Member Leah Duncan, whose efforts were instrumental in making this event a success. Leah’s tireless work—spanning social media, TV, and radio—helped spread the message that New Orleans is a vibrant hub for delicious, animal-free dining. For the second consecutive year, Chef Orawin Yimchalam of Thaihey NOLA earned top honors as both Best Chef and Best Restaurant. Breads on Oak took second place and also won the Vegan Community Favorite award, while I-talGarden claimed third prize and Best Burger.

In other vegan news, we’re excited to host a festive Friendsgiving potluck, where friends and supporters can come together and share some holiday cheer. We’d love to see you on Sunday the 24th! RSVP at info@humanela.org and let us know what dish you’ll be bringing to share!

Organizing for Animals in Avoyelles. Helping caring community members to advocate for animals is central to our mission. We’re grateful to Avoyelles Today for helping spread the word about our recent town hall meeting, where we discussed plans to build an animal shelter and establish local animal control services. The event saw an excellent turnout, with Police Jurors Jacob Coco and Sam Pearce leading an engaging discussion on the next steps forward.
